ALG Opening New PPE Manufacturing Facility Near Ft. Wayne; Company Looking to Hire 80 New Employees

BRYAN, OH - ALG Health, a leading domestic producer of PPE products using globally-sourced material, has announced it will be opening a new facility in Antwerp, Ohio just outside of the Ft. Wayne area to accelerate production and delivery of PPE products. During the pandemic ALG Health worked to support first responders, now the company is continuing their efforts. In addition to the new facility, ALG is looking to hire 80 new employees immediately to staff operations.

Founded in 2020 to create high-quality, reliable products to keep the world safe during the global pandemic, ALG Health has produced more than 18 million masks and respirators using the best globally-sourced materials. ALG products have been delivered to nearly all 50 states and world-wide. The company currently employs more than 40 team members in the northwest Ohio region.

“It’s important for ALG Health to continue our history of manufacturing excellence in the midwest,” said Adam Harmon, founder of ALG Health. “Throughout the pandemic we were committed to keeping the world safe and we continue to believe in this mission.”

ALG’s new facility will allow the company to accelerate production. The 145,000 square foot Antwerp facility features over 50 state-of-the-art PPE manufacturing machines producing more than a dozen products. The facility will have a production capacity of 150 million pieces of PPE annually.

ALG is looking to hire 80 new employees immediately to operate the new facility. All positions are available and the company is offering competitive compensation. Interested candidates can apply at alg-health.com.
